

Establishment of an engineering discipline focussed on creating secure software Future Internet services and systems.. Software and security engineering research are combined and consolidated in an integrated and interdisciplinary engineering process with the aim of creating trustworthy services. The specific engineering activities range from requirements engineering and analysis, over the creation of architectures, high-level and detailed design into implementation through the reuse and composition of existing artifacts, as well as through the programming of new entities, typically components and services.